

THE O. C. DAILY.

VOL. 4. TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1867. NO. 55.

The negro population of Baltimore must be quite large, I judge. They perform most of the hard labor, especially the loading and unloading of vessels.— They seem cheerful, and work lively, and as far as I observed, are well treated, and they in turn are polite, and will not run against you in carrying their load, though their way may be ever so much obstructed, but give timely warning to get out of the way, by calling out, "Look out sah!" and then give you time to step aside. They handle the crates of peaches with considerable skill, and with much greater care than we should expect from white laborers at the north.

I was surprised at the lack of business along this railroad between Baltimore and Philadelphia. The stations on the road are unimportant, merely places to take on, and put off a few passengers, and they are few and far between. The country most of the way looks well, and some parts are truly fine, and the broad Delaware flowing through it, adds very much to its beauty. It appears that navigators of these waters are subject to disasters, as well as mariners on the broad ocean. In passing, I saw a schooner sunk, with her masts sticking out of the water, and the sails still hanging to her booms. She may have been caught in the storm last night, or perhaps collision with another vessel, sent her to the bottom.

NEW-YORK, AUG. 29.—Arrived here at half past five this evening and can hardly realize that within the short space of seven and a half hours I have passed through portions of five of the States of the union.

A letter from Mrs. Bronson, Derby, Conn., aunt to E. G. H. says that Mrs. Bristol and her daughter who visited the Community a few weeks since, have both been greatly benefitted by their visit. Mrs. Bristol lost a daughter two years ago, (twin sister of the one who was here,) in consequence of which she has at times been partially insane. She is now joyous and happy, and thinks her visit here will do her good for years to come. She also has a son who believes in the Community.

Mrs. Blood writes that they are to move into a house about half a mile from the Village, on a cross road not traveled much. She says Mr. B. has been looking for a place to work about a fortnight, and has at length succeeded in getting employment in a tin-shop in Milford, Mass., about eighty miles from Mason Village. She says she has strong hope that Henry will be back here in a few weeks. She thinks Mr. B. has about as much as he can attend to, and don't get much comfort from his family either.

WILLOW-PLACE :—Mr. Wescott brought up his first load of little girls this morning. Fourteen little Anns, Maggies and Janes, averaging about eleven years of age. Their first day's work was done "as well as could be expected," and at night when seated in the wagon, they looked as happy as larks in the prospect of having a nice ride home. This accession increases the number of hands in the Silk-room to forty-eight.

Mrs. Lynde was sincerely criticised Saturday night. She has been in a hard, disobedient and fanatical state for some time past, and the family have had long patience with her. Last night she seemed quite softened and confessed that she had been under a hard diabolical spirit—that she had clung to her outside friends, which had separated her from the family entirely, and made her disobedient.

The contract between the O. C. and Mr. Ingols, was completed yesterday, and the papers signed last night after meeting, and it will take effect between the fifteenth and twenty-second of this month. The agreement extends to the first of April next, but if either of the parties wish to dissolve the contract before that time, they can do so by giving the other thirty day's notice. The property is valued at about $2,300 instead of $23,000 (a mistake of the compositor) as reported yesterday.

ERRATUM.—In the item on filling trap-orders in yesterday's DAILY, an omission occurred in the first sentence, which makes the meaning rather obscure.

It should have read thus; "It was reported last night, that all the traps ordered, that were to be shipped by the first of Sept. &c."

Report says that D. J. B. swam across the W. P. pond and back, a few days since, a distance of over 200 yards. This is thought to be quite a feat performed without the aid of feet.

The dining-room was taken in hand yesterday, and nicely white-washed by one of the girls, or rather a young woman. So much for a beginning of reform there.

Four hundred and thirty-five cans of tomatoes were packed yesterday. We shall commence putting up corn to-day.

The farmers sold their barley 794 bushels for $1.26 per bushel which amounts to just $1,000.44.

Bags made in August,	74½ doz.
“ ordered in “	71½ “
“ sales, “ “	$3,105.36.
